

Ethics and Anti-Corruption: A Panel Discussion with Supply Professionals

Panelist:

Andrew N. Paskin

Managing Partner
Global Manufacturing Solutions
Collier Court, Tustin Ranch, CA
Phone: 310-738-9975
andrewnp@gmsinc.biz

Session Code: TG

Session Description:

Ethics and Anti-Corruption are two of ISM's Principles of Sustainability. These principles are extremely critical to supply management professionals in today's business environment. This panel discussion focuses on ethics in the workplace. The session concludes with a facilitated dialogue between panelists and attendees.

Biography:

Andrew Paskin is a senior executive with a proven track record in building corporate value in manufacturing, engineering and quality, through a combination of advanced problem solving and teamwork. He is well-versed in the nuances of world-class manufacturing operations with 20 years international experience, and has developed a reputation as a savvy businessman, strategic thinker, and "fire fighter." He is focused on developing customer centric strategies that build market competitiveness and has a strong track record of utilizing change management to advance performance, either in new ventures, start-ups, turnarounds or in high-growth companies.

Mr. Paskin's management style has evolved to be highly adaptive, taking critical stylistic assessments into account in making decisions. He is a skilled "hands-on" leader, trainer, and motivator with effective interpersonal skills at all organizational levels. He enthusiastically embraces challenges; immensely enjoys turning around troubled operations and seeing the results of his teams' collaborative efforts.

